

New UK Legislation Raises Prospect of 1.5% Stamp Tax Charge on Equity Financings

July 10, 2023

The Retained EU Law \(Revocation and Reform\) Act 2023 became law in the UK on 29 June 2023. Broad in scope, the Revocation and Reform Act will, with effect from the end of this year, sweep away a number of European Union-derived laws and rights that survived Brexit, unless positive steps are taken to retain those laws or rights.

The UK may therefore be on course to repeal legislation that preserves in UK law an EU-derived prohibition on imposing UK stamp taxes (at a rate of 1.5%) on issuances and certain transfers of shares to a depository receipt issuer or clearance service. This prohibition has benefited a number of businesses – including UK-parented groups with American depository shares listed on US exchanges, or whose shares trade directly through the Depository Trust Company – for more than a decade, and it has helped ensure that the UK remains an attractive jurisdiction in which to establish public companies.

The Revocation and Reform Act confers powers on the UK government to save particular laws or rights from repeal, if it wishes to do so – it is therefore hoped that steps will be taken sooner rather than later to retain the current legal position so that the 1.5% stamp tax charge will not apply in respect of issuances of shares or transfers of shares which are integral to a raising of capital (whether by using these powers or by some other means, such as via new legislation). An opportune moment to do this would be on tax “Legislation Day” (18 July 2023), when draft legislation to be included in a forthcoming Finance Bill is expected to be published. However, in the absence of a clear indication from the government as to its stance from a policy perspective – beyond a simple reference to the matter on a government “dashboard” – there remains considerable uncertainty as to what the outcome will be.

Cooley is among those working to ensure that the UK government is aware of the importance of the government clarifying its policy in respect of this issue as soon as possible – and taking action before the end of the year to retain the current position.

This content is provided for general informational purposes only, and your access or use of the content does not create an attorney-client relationship between you or your organization and Cooley LLP, Cooley (UK) LLP, or any other affiliated practice or entity (collectively referred to as “Cooley”). By accessing this content, you agree that the information provided does not constitute legal or other professional advice. This content is not a substitute for obtaining legal advice from a qualified attorney licensed in your jurisdiction and you should not act or refrain from acting based on this content. This content may be changed without notice. It is not guaranteed to be complete, correct or up to date, and it may not reflect the most current legal developments. Prior results do not guarantee a similar outcome. Do not send any confidential information to Cooley, as we do not have any duty to keep any information you provide to us confidential. This content may be considered Attorney Advertising and is subject to our legal notices.

Key Contacts

Jack Jones London	jack.jones@cooley.com +44 (0) 20 7556 4202
David Wilson London	dwilson@cooley.com +44 (0) 20 7556 4473
Natasha Kaye London	nkaye@cooley.com +44 (0) 20 7556 4339
Eerik Kukebal London	ekukebal@cooley.com +44 (0) 20 7556 4511

This information is a general description of the law; it is not intended to provide specific legal advice nor is it intended to create an attorney-client relationship with Cooley LLP. Before taking any action on this information you should seek professional counsel.

Copyright © 2023 Cooley LLP, 3175 Hanover Street, Palo Alto, CA 94304; Cooley (UK) LLP, 22 Bishopsgate, London, UK EC2N 4BQ. Permission is granted to make and redistribute, without charge, copies of this entire document provided that such copies are complete and unaltered and identify Cooley LLP as the author. All other rights reserved.