Aasees focuses her practice on commercial real estate law and complex real estate transactions, including the acquisition and disposition of commercial properties, office, industrial, data center and retail leasing, and financing and investment matters.

Before joining Cooley, Aasees began her legal career as an associate at another large law firm in New York, representing clients in various real estate matters, including acquisitions and dispositions, joint ventures and financings.

During law school, Aasees worked as a research assistant for professor Christine Farley and competed as part of her law school's Moot Court Honor Society, winning Best Oralist at the Tulane Law School Moot Court Invitational. Before pursuing her legal education, Aasees worked in the advertising industry in Chicago and New York.
