Cooley

Rachel Preston
Associate

rpreston@cooley.com

+1 202 776 2315

Washington, DC

Intellectual Property
Intellectual Property Litigation

Rachel represents clients in high-stakes intellectual property litigation, with a focus on patent disputes in federal district court and before the US Patent and Trademark Office. She has experience handling patent infringement, Hatch-Waxman, and trade secret matters across a range of industries, including pharmaceuticals, chemical and materials processing, and software. Rachel also maintains a strong pro bono practice dedicated to supporting active-duty service members and veterans, drawing on her experience as a captain in the US Army Reserve.

She earned her JD from George Mason University's Antonin Scalia Law School, where she served as publications editor of the Journal of Law, Economics & Policy and provided pro bono services to entrepreneurs and inventors as a member of Scalia Law's Innovation Law Clinic. Before pursuing her JD, Rachel worked in the materials science field, developing biodegradable polymers.

Education

George Mason University, Antonin Scalia Law School
JD, Patent Law concentration, 2023

The Ohio State University
BS, Chemistry, 2017

Admissions & Credentials

US Patent and Trademark Office

District of Columbia