Alex's practice focuses on public and private securities offerings. She advises underwriters and issuers on a variety of debt and equity transactions, including high-yield bond offerings, private placements, exchange offers, tender offers, initial public offerings (IPOs) and follow-on equity offerings. She also assists public company clients with Securities and Exchange Commission reporting and compliance obligations.

Before joining Cooley, Alex was a capital markets associate in the London office of a US-based international law firm. During law school, she was an editor for the Berkeley Technology Law Journal and a clinical student in the Samuelson Law, Technology & Public Policy Clinic where she helped co-author a legal guide for authors writing about real people. She was also a research assistant to professor Jennifer Urban, collaborating with researchers from the Berkeley Laboratory for Usable and Experimental Security and the International Computer Science Institute to investigate legal issues related to mHealth applications and data privacy.
