Baasit is a committed advocate for emerging companies who takes the time to understand his clients' needs and goals and then does the legal work to achieve them thoroughly and efficiently. He handles legal formalities so his clients can focus on what they do best – whether they're first-time founders navigating startup formation or experienced in-house lawyers coordinating fast-paced acquisitions. A programmer by background, Baasit enjoys working with software companies and has a grounded understanding of the evolving intersection between law and technology.
