Commercial Litigation

Joshua Siegel litigates a wide array of cases in federal and state courts and in arbitration. His practice involves numerous substantive areas of law, including complex commercial transactions and contracts, employment, class actions, medical devices, pharmaceuticals, intellectual property, government contracts, business torts, unfair business practices and consumer protection act claims, trade secrets, and corporate governance disputes.

Josh also has extensive experience litigating complex e-discovery disputes, allegations concerning spoliation and the destruction of evidence, and the handling of electronically stored information in pre-trial discovery. Joshua is also a member of the Cooley Pro Bono Committee, and has considerable trial experience representing refugees who seek asylum in the United States after suffering torture and persecution in their home countries as a result of their religious or political beliefs.

Representative matters include:

- The Boeing Company v. Symvionics, Inc.: Defended engineering and management support services company against defense contractor's allegations of defects in delivery of U.S. Navy flight training simulators.
- New England Patriots v. StubHub, Inc.: Represented defendant against claims it tortiously interfered with plaintiff's relationships with its season ticket holders by encouraging them to unlawfully resell tickets.
- SigmaPharm, Inc. v. Mutual Pharmaceutical Company, Inc.: Represented defendant against alleged violations of antitrust laws and related state law claims relating to development of generic pharmaceuticals.
- K2M, Inc. v. Reliant Medical, LLC: Represented medical device company in action against former employees and distributors for trade secret theft, fraud, and breach of non-competition, non-solicitation, and non-disclosure agreements.
