

Matthew Ritter

Associate

mritter@cooley.com

+1 202 776 2090

Washington, DC

Intellectual Property

Intellectual Property Litigation

Patent Office Litigation

Trade Secret Litigation and Dispute Counseling

Trials

Matthew focuses on intellectual property litigation in federal district court, at the US International Trade Commission and before the US Patent and Trademark Office. He has litigated cases involving semiconductor device design and manufacture, consumer electronic devices, software, mobile devices and Internet of Things (IoT) solutions. Matthew also works on pro bono immigration matters.

During law school, Matthew worked as a student associate for the Indiana University Maurer School of Law's Intellectual Property Law Clinic, representing clients on intellectual property matters. He also worked overseas as a Milt Stewart fellow in Cambodia, assisting clients with issues related to corporate compliance, labor regulations and intellectual property enforcement.

Before joining Cooley, Matthew worked at a global intellectual property boutique firm.

Education

Indiana University Maurer School of Law

JD, cum laude, 2021

Oakland University

BA, Electrical and Computer Engineering, cum laude, 2018

Admissions & Credentials

Massachusetts

Registered to practice before the United States Patent and Trademark Office (USPTO)

Not admitted to practice in District of Columbia

Supervised by licensed members of the DC Bar

Memberships & Affiliations

International Trade Commission Trial Lawyers Association