Impact Investing and Mission-Driven Enterprises

Tamim works with emerging companies throughout their life cycles, with a focus on high-growth companies in the technology space. He also advises venture capital funds, corporate VCs and angel investors who invest in high-growth private companies. Tamim has a deep understanding of New York's entrepreneurial ecosystem and has worked across multiple verticals while developing a particular interest in foodtech, impact investing and cross border ventures. In addition to the US, Tamim also has a robust practice in France and in LatAm. He actively mentors emerging companies at all stages and is a regular guest lecturer teaching law and entrepreneurship at Cornell. Tamim is a member of the New York pro bono committee.
