Claire litigates nationwide and her practice focuses on complex commercial litigation, contractual disputes, defense of class actions, and securities litigation in both state and federal court. Her clients come from a wide range of industries and include healthcare providers, biotechnology companies, financial institutions, and technology start-ups. Claire also has substantial experience representing clients in investigations by the Financial Industry Regulatory Authority ("FINRA") and the Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC").

While attending Cornell Law School, Claire was a member of the International Law Journal and served as an associate editor at the Legal Information Institute. She also worked as a judicial extern to the Honorable Richard Seeborg, Chief District Judge, Northern District of California and interned for the San Francisco District Attorney.
