

Bethany M. Robinson

Associate

bmrobinson@cooley.com

Commercial Litigation

+1 202 776 2110

Washington, DC

Bethany represents clients in high-stakes government and internal investigations and complicated commercial disputes. Bethany has worked with clients in a range of industries, including financial services, technology, life sciences, real estate, transportation and entertainment. She has experience assisting clients in all phases of litigation, from prelitigation counseling to trial. Bethany also maintains an active pro bono practice, with experience in prisoners' rights, housing, reproductive rights, criminal appeals and legislative advocacy matters.

At Yale Law School, Bethany was a policy editor for the Yale Law & Policy Review, participated in the Housing and Reproductive Rights and Justice Project clinics, and interned at the US District Court for the Southern District of New York with Judge Lewis J. Liman. She also was a member of the Black Law Students Association and the Latinx Law Students Association.

Before joining Cooley, Bethany was an associate at a US-based international law firm.

Education

Yale Law School

JD , 2021

University of Chicago

AB with honors, 2016

Admissions & Credentials

District of Columbia

New York

Court Admissions

US District Court for the Eastern District of New York

US District Court for the Northern District of New York

US District Court for the Southern District of New York