Pang Lee routinely advises on partnership, corporate and securities law matters related to the organization and investment in private funds and strategic investments in the tech industry. Pang has worked closely with members of the Hong Kong start-up community cultivating its emerging companies ecosystem, with a particular focus in healthcare and emerging technology companies. Pang regularly advises private fund managers and institutional investors on United States and Hong Kong regulatory, corporate governance, and risk-related matters.

Pang brings a global perspective in his work, having worked in New York, San Francisco, Hong Kong and Shanghai in over two decades of private practice. He serves as the risk management partner for all of the Cooley offices in Asia, and is a member of the firm's global risk management committee, the pro bono committee and DEI committee.

Pang regularly speaks at regional industry conferences in Greater China and Southeast Asia, including serving as a moderator at the Asia Venture Capital Journal (AVCJ) for over a decade. He is a member of the Legal & Regulatory Council of the Global Private Capital Association (GPCA). Additionally, Pang serves as a Trustee at the Shanghai American School, and is the chair of the Trusteeship Committee.

Pang is ranked as a leading Investment Funds lawyer by Chambers Greater China and was honored as Investment Funds Lawyer of the Year at The Legal 500 China Law Awards 2025.
