

California Supreme Court Clarifies Employers' Obligation to Provide "Suitable Seating" to Employees

June 28, 2016

The California Supreme Court has issued a recent opinion (Kilby v. CVS Pharmacy, Inc., No. S215614) interpreting, for the first time, California's Wage Order requirement that "all working employees shall be provided with suitable seats when the nature of the work reasonably permits the use of a seat."

The Court held that employers should review employee tasks performed at each specific work location, rather than all of the tasks the employee performs throughout the day, and consider whether, based on the totality of the circumstances, it is feasible and practicable for employees to perform those location-specific tasks while seated. The Court unambiguously ruled that an employer's preference that employees stand is irrelevant and cannot be a part of this analysis. The employer's business judgment about the underlying nature of the work, however, is relevant.

Under this analysis, each time an employee changes location to perform tasks, employers must make a particularized assessment as to whether it would be feasible to provide a seat in that location. The physical characteristics and layout of a workspace "may be relevant" as a part of a "totality of the circumstances inquiry." However, "reasonableness remains the ultimate touchstone," and employers may not "unreasonably design a workspace to further a preference for standing." Employers may also take into consideration whether a seat would unduly interfere with other tasks that require standing in that location, whether frequently transitioning from sitting to standing interferes with the work, or whether seated work impacts the quality and effectiveness of overall job performance.

Under the California Private Attorneys General Act, a plaintiff may seek recovery of penalties for violations of the seating requirement on behalf of all aggrieved employees. Penalties are $100 for each aggrieved employee per pay period for the initial violation and $200 for each aggrieved employee per pay period for each subsequent violation. These penalties add up. The 9th Circuit, which certified questions regarding interpretation of the seating requirement to the California Supreme Court, conservatively estimated that the damages in the cases before it were "in the tens of millions of dollars."

In light of this decision, employers who do not currently provide seats at all times should examine the nature of their employees' tasks, duties, and work environments. Employers must determine whether the tasks performed at each specific work location (such as those performed at a cash register) may reasonably and feasibly be performed while seated, and ensure that employees have seats when they are not actively engaged in their duties. Employers in industries such as manufacturing, retail, and hospitality may be particularly affected.

Our attorneys have deep counseling and litigation experience on these issues. To discuss these issues further or pose questions about this alert, please contact one of the attorneys listed below.

This content is provided for general informational purposes only, and your access or use of the content does not create an attorney-client relationship between you or your organization and Cooley LLP, Cooley (UK) LLP, or any other affiliated practice or entity (collectively referred to as "Cooley"). By accessing this content, you agree that the information provided does not constitute legal or other professional advice. This content is not a substitute for obtaining legal advice from a qualified attorney licensed in your jurisdiction, and you should not act or refrain from acting based on this content. This content may be changed without notice. It is not guaranteed to be complete, correct or up to date, and it may not reflect the most current legal developments. Prior results do not guarantee a similar outcome. Do not send any confidential information to Cooley, as we do not have any duty to keep any information you provide to us confidential. When advising companies, our attorney-client relationship is with the company, not with any individual. This content may have been generated with the assistance of artificial intelligence (AI) in accordance with our AI Principles, may be considered Attorney Advertising and is subject to our legal notices.

Key Contacts

Wendy Brenner Palo Alto	brennerwj@cooley.com +1 650 843 5371
Leslie Cancel San Francisco	lcancel@cooley.com +1 415 693 2175
Joshua Mates San Francisco	jmates@cooley.com +1 415 693 2084
Michael Sheetz Boston	msheetz@cooley.com +1 617 937 2330

This information is a general description of the law; it is not intended to provide specific legal advice nor is it intended to create an attorney-client relationship with Cooley LLP. Before taking any action on this information you should seek professional counsel.

Copyright © 2023 Cooley LLP, 3175 Hanover Street, Palo Alto, CA 94304; Cooley (UK) LLP, 22 Bishopsgate, London, UK EC2N 4BQ. Permission is granted to make and redistribute, without charge, copies of this entire document provided that such copies are complete and unaltered and identify Cooley LLP as the author. All other rights reserved.