

EU Loosens State Aid Rules Amid COVID-19 Outbreak

March 27, 2020

(Updated April 28, 2020)

Any measure by EU member states granting a selective financial advantage to one or more companies and capable to distort competition is considered state aid. State aid needs prior notification and approval by the European Commission (EC). Similar rules apply in relation to Norway, Iceland and Lichtenstein. Rationale for this state aid control is to guarantee a level playing field for businesses in the EU and to avoid wealthier member states excessively favoring their companies.

Given the serious threat that COVID-19 poses not only for public health but also for the entire economy, the EC has issued a communication committing to a quick clearance procedure (so far, approx. 24/48 hours) for all aid measures that member states are planning to take. This refers in particular to measures supporting sectors directly affected by the outbreak – like transport, tourism, culture, hospitality and retail. When assessing aid for these industries, the EC will broadly check (i) the exceptionality of the circumstances, (ii) the fact that the compensated damage is a direct consequence of the natural disaster and (iii) the absence of overcompensation. Other measures not relating to these sectors will be assessed under the usual stricter decision standard of “aid to remedy a serious disturbance in the economy of a Member State.”

Once the aid is approved, companies willing to benefit from such support will have to apply at the national level, going through the administrative process established by the relevant national authorities.

Companies should be mindful that in case unapproved aid (illegal aid) is received, these payments must be recovered by the member state with interest. Competitors and other interested parties aware of illegal aid being granted may lodge complaints to the EC or litigate before national courts. The EC can also launch investigations on its own initiative. Therefore, companies should always carry out legal due diligence and ensure that the aid measure complies with EU and national laws.

Please see below the list of national measures authorized by the EC so far – new measures are submitted every day:
