Isabelle advises clients on complex real estate transactions across various asset classes, with experience spanning acquisitions and dispositions, financings, leasing and development matters. As a member of Cooley's infrastructure, energy and real estate group, she works with clients on transactions involving sophisticated real estate and commercial considerations.

Before joining Cooley, Isabelle practiced at an international law firm in New York, where she represented developers, owners and other real estate clients in a range of transactional matters.

Isabelle earned her JD from Fordham University School of Law, where she was an associate editor of the Fordham International Law Journal, and her BA from Washington University in St. Louis. She speaks French and Russian.
