Maddie focuses on a range of corporate transactions, including M&A, venture capital and private equity.

Before joining Cooley, she trained with and qualified into the corporate and securities team at an international law firm in London. She also completed an internship with the legal and compliance team at GE HealthCare and worked for more than three years in brand management and marketing.

Maddie is particularly interested in pro bono and diversity initiatives. She serves on the board of trustees of MyPeriod, a charity seeking to tackle period poverty and improve period equity in the UK through accessible products and education. She is also co-founder of Female Lawyers Breakfast Networking, a group aiming to bring female lawyers and diversity, equity and inclusion supporters together at events across the UK and internationally.
