Alicia is an associate in the commercial litigation practice group in Cooley's London office. She advises clients on an eclectic range of commercial disputes, whether in court proceedings or arbitration, and she assists clients with internal and regulatory investigations.

Alicia's recent representative experience includes:

- Acting for IQVIA in its successful defence of a High Court of Justice of England and Wales claim brought by Cardiorientis for more than $300 million in damages for alleged breaches of services provided in respect of a global clinical trial
- Advising online marketplaces on product safety and other regulatory issues, as well as related disputes and investigations
- Representing a government in International Chamber of Commerce (ICC) arbitration against a national healthcare provider
- Conducting internal investigations for clients, and helping to resolve the issues and disputes that arise as a result
- Working on a range of contractual, construction and asset recovery disputes

Alicia's training rotation covered such practice areas as litigation, technology transactions, product regulation and compliance, employment and labour, antitrust and competition, and corporate transactions (including M&A and venture capital investments) and governance.

Before joining Cooley, Alicia was a paralegal at a private prosecution firm with a focus on complex financial fraud.
