Juan works in international arbitration, international treaty arbitration, public international law, and international economic law. He has experience representing clients before arbitral tribunals in a wide variety of cross-border transactions and economic activities. He also counsels companies on how to navigate complex regulatory issues regarding international trade, sanction regulations and export controls. Before joining Cooley, Juan was Senior Advisor at the Argentine Secretary of Commerce working in international trade and investment issues. He is a bilingual lawyer (Spanish and English), proficient in French and has working ability in Portuguese.

Before joining Cooley, Juan worked as senior advisor to the Undersecretary of Foreign Trade of Argentina. In this capacity, he managed and oversaw the legal coordination of international trade negotiations (investment, services, intellectual property, trade in goods, among others), He was also a senior negotiator for the Ministry of Production of investment agreements with Japan, the Mercosur (Procotolo del Mercosur), Qatar, Chile and Mexico in representing the Ministry of Production.

Moreover, he supervised the bilateral commercial relationship between Argentina and the United States. This included coordinating the Commercial Dialogue between United States and Argentina, which is a bilateral platform for the exchange of best practices in trade and investment between the US Secretary of Commerce and the Argentine Ministry of Production. In addition, Juan single-handedly managed the Argentine reinsertion into the General Preferential System (GSP) before the USTR. Argentina was readmitted to the system in December 2018.

He is an Assistant Professor of International Law at the University of Buenos Aires, Argentina since 2016 and teaches workshops and gives conferences on international investment law, international law and international arbitration.
