Julia focuses her practice on general commercial litigation.

In law school, Julia concentrated her coursework on the intersection of technology and law, taking courses covering, for example, data privacy, net neutrality and First Amendment issues in online spaces. She also participated in the Youth and Education Law Project, which works to ensure that disadvantaged youth have access to education. In addition, Julia served as an editor for the Stanford Law Review and Stanford Law Review Online, and she coordinated affinity group events as a co-social chair for Stanford's Asian and Pacific Islander Law Students Association.
